Digital Sociology Deborah Lupton, 2014-11-05 We now live in a digital society. New digital technologies have had a profound influence on everyday life: social relations, government, commerce, the economy, and the production and dissemination of knowledge. People's movements in space, their purchasing habits, and their online communication with others are now monitored in detail by digital technologies. We are increasingly becoming digital data subjects, whether we like it or not, and whether we choose this or not. The sub-discipline of digital sociology provides a means by which the impact, development, and use of these technologies and their incorporation into social worlds, social institutions, and concepts of selfhood and embodiment may be investigated, analysed, and understood. This book introduces a range of interesting social, cultural, and political dimensions of digital society and discusses some of the important debates occurring in research and scholarship on these aspects. It covers the new knowledge economy and big data, reconceptualising research in the digital era, the digitisation of higher education, the diversity of digital use, digital politics, and citizen digital engagement, the politics of surveillance, privacy issues, the contribution of digital devices to embodiment and concepts of selfhood, and many other topics. Digital Sociology is essential reading, not only for students and academics in sociology, anthropology, media and communication, digital cultures, digital humanities, internet studies, science and technology studies, cultural geography, and social computing, but for other readers interested in the social impact of digital technologies.

Labour and Social Transformation in Central and Eastern Europe Violaine Delteil, Vassil Nikolaev Kirov, 2016-07-22 Over a quarter of a century after the fall of the Berlin Wall and 10 years after their accession to the European Union (EU), Central and Eastern European Countries (CEECs) still show marked differences with the rest of Europe in the fields of labour, work, and industrial relations. This book presents a detailed and original analysis of labour and social transformations in the CEECs. By examining a wide range of countries in Central Europe, Labour and Social Transformation in Central and Eastern Europe offers a comprehensive and contrasting view of labour developments in Central and Eastern Europe. Chapters explore three related issues. The first deals with the understanding of the complex process of Europeanization applied in the sphere of labour, employment, and industrial relations. The second issue refers to the attempt to link the Europeanization approach with an analysis mobilizing the theoretical concept of dependent capitalism. The third issue refers to the cumulative trends of labour weakening and labour awakening that has emerged in particular in the aftermath of the crisis beginning in 2007-2008. This book will be of interest to academics, policy makers, and stakeholders at European and national level in the EU member states.

instinctive that we refine by watching our own mothers and others in our community. We rarely think of motherhood as something that is time and culturally specific yet like culture itself it is socially constructed and both motherhood and childhood evolve over time. With the rise in educational attainment of mothers in the American population the expectations associated with childhood increasingly include not just education but cognitive development and extracurricular activities as the partnership between parents and education intensifies in the joint project of human development of children. Motherhood, Childhood and Parenting in an Age of Education offers a new way to conceptualize the high demands of contemporary parenthood. It traces the emerging narrative about the good mother, changes in the underlying assumptions of what constitutes the good mother and the implications for the good childhood as education grows in institutional strength. This book demonstrates that education is driving the formation of the parent and child roles in the dominant contemporary culture of the US although alternate models exist. Education itself has expanded over time to become our largest social intervention defining behaviors and beliefs such as parental involvement in schooling, the unengaged parent and the deficient student.
