Boating ,2001-11      Drug Abuse: Prevention and Treatment Mangai Natarajan,2017-05-15 Ever since the Shanghai convention in 1909 the threat posed to human well being by drug abuse has led countries around the world to take action to deal with their drug problems There are wide variations in the policies pursued but most countries try to reduce both the supply of and the demand for drugs Unfortunately there is little research consensus on the respective merits of these two approaches or about the best ways to pursue them Consequently control and prevention policies are mostly driven by political considerations economic realities and cultural expectations though research has played an important part in formulating and evaluating treatments for drug addiction This volume reviews studies on drug abuse prevention and treatment strategies under five main areas 1 Reducing supply strategies to control the flow of drugs from production to retail distribution 2 Reducing demand prevention of drug use at all stages of involvement and consumption levels 3 Reducing harm promoting situational risk reduction practices for regular users addicts and recreational users 4 Reducing addiction drug treatment options for various groups in various settings and 5 Drug policies and prescriptions focused on debates about prohibition and legalization

Economics of Protected Marine Species: Concepts in Research and Management Kristy Wallmo,Kathryn Bisack,Daniel K. Lew,Dale E. Squires,2016-10-21 Protected marine species have populations that are depleted decreasing or are at risk of extinction or local extirpation As of 2015 The International Union for the Conservation of Nature a global environmental organization lists approximately 737 marine species worldwide that are considered at risk of extinction Many are provided legal protection through national laws requiring research and management measures aimed at recovering and maintaining the species at a sustainable population level Integral to the policy decision process involving the management and recovery of marine species is the consideration of trade offs between the economic and ecological costs and benefits of protection This suggests that economics at its core the study of trade offs has a significant role In the U S a somewhat traditional use of economics in protected species research and management has involved cost minimization or cost effectiveness analyses to help select or prioritize conservation actions Economic research has also provided estimates of public non market benefits of recovering species which can be used in larger management frameworks such as ecosystem based management and coastal and marine spatial planning Inherent in much of this research however are complex biological and ecological relationships in which varying degrees of scientific uncertainty are present Addressing this type of uncertainty can affect the economic outcomes related to protected species For example recent work suggests that increasing scientific precision in biological sampling and models can greatly affect the magnitude of economic benefits to commercial fisheries while other research suggests that public non market benefits of species recovery are sensitive to uncertainty about baseline population estimates Previous research has illustrated the importance of understanding the biological ecological and economic aspects of protected species management and recovery In this research topic we synthesize current protected marine species economic research and expand the discussion on present and future challenges related to protected species economics The series of manuscripts brings together an array of prominent researchers and advances our understanding of the ecological and economic aspects of managing and recovering protected marine species
