

A Simplified Guide to Heat Treating Tool Steels

When we consider that the greater overall costs of most tools and dies are incurred prior to heat treatment and further that proper heat treatment is critical to the successful application of tooling, this so-called "hardening" process is placed in it's proper perspective of importance. While there are a number of specialized procedures which can be employed in the heat treatment of tool steels, the purpose of this discussion is to review the basic heat treating process, it's steps and terms, and perhaps offer some helpful hints along the way.

The Heat Treating Process

The process consists of:

- A) PREHEATING the Annealed tool, typically at 1250 degrees F.
- B) AUSTENITIZING (Soaking at High Heat).
- C) QUENCHING – Quench to Hard Brittle (Martensite) condition.
- D) TEMPERING (Drawing to desired hardness).

Annealing

Tool steels are furnished in the annealed condition which is the soft, machineable and necessary condition for proper heat treat response. The exceptions to this are the prehardened steels such as P-20, Brake Die, Holder Block and Maxel Tooling Plate which are furnished at 28/32 HRC and used at that hardness.

Tool steels should always be annealed prior to re-hardening and annealed steels should be re-annealed after welding. Unlike hardening which requires a quench after soaking at the hardening temperature, the essence of annealing is very slow cooling from the annealing temperature. By way of example, A2 tool steel is annealed by heating to 1550 degrees F, soaking for two hours at temperature, furnace cooling 50 degrees F per hour to below 1200 degrees F followed by air cooling. Some shops anneal late in the day after all other heat treating has been finished by simply soaking the part to be annealed at the proper annealing temperature and then turning the furnace off. The next morning the part is fully annealed and ready for handling.

Preheating

Preheating plays no part in the actual hardening reaction and is often considered an unnecessary step. However, preheating performs at least one major function, it minimizes thermal shock, thus reducing the danger of excessive distortion, warping or cracking. As a matter of fact, intricate tools and particularly high speed steels, are often preheated in two steps: one below the transformation temperature and the second right at the transformation temperature. Preheating does not require "soaking" but the tool should be equalized at the preheat temperature. Remember, always bring your tools up with the furnace to the preheating temperature.

Austenitizing (High Heat)

Austenitizing depends upon time and temperature, thus the common term, soak at high heat. Of the two, temperature is the most critical. Never exceed the high heat range for the grade. Excessive temperature will cause erratic results. Classic symptoms of overheating are low as-quenched hardnesses and, depending upon the alloy content, shrinkage and loss of magnetic properties. Soaking time should always be after the steel has caught up with the furnace temperature. With the exception of high speed steels, a rule of thumb for soak time is one half hour per inch of thickness with a forty-five minute minimum and if in doubt over how long to soak a tool, soak it longer – never less. High speed steels are essentially equalized with the furnace temperature as opposed to soaking due to the fact that the high heat range is so close to the melting point. Essentially, high speed steels are equalized at the austenitizing (High Heat) temperature in minutes of furnace time, never soaked.
