Competitiveness of South Asia's Container Ports Matías Herrera Dappe, Ancor Suárez-Alemán, 2016-06-28 South Asia s trade almost doubled in the past decade but the share of trade in GDP is still smaller 47 percent than in East Asia 55 percent and South Asia s economic competitiveness continues to lag that of other regions Part of the problem is the region s container ports As a result of inefficiencies the average cost of exporting or importing a container in the region is more than twice what it is in East Asia Better port logistics could help increase trade diversify exports attract more foreign direct investment and spur economic growth As container traffic continues to grow and physical expansion is constrained by the limited supply of available land at most ports the best way to improve port performance is by increasing productivity To identify strategies for doing so this report examines the performance of the 14 largest container ports in the region based on two sets of criteria operational performance and economic performance To measure operational performance the report benchmarks total time at port waiting time at port and idle time as a share of total time at berth To measure economic performance it benchmarks productivity and efficiency using two useful techniques Malmquist total factor productivity decomposition and data envelopment analysis The report identifies key drivers of port performance and examines how differences in performance across ports are related to those drivers This analysis is based on an original dataset on private sector participation governance and competition in South Asia s container port sector To highlight the potential gains from improving performance of container ports the report uses econometric techniques to isolate the impact of efficiency improvements on maritime transport costs and trade The results suggest that the best strategy for improving port performance in the region is a three pronged approach that a encourages private sector participation through a well developed enabling environment including further adoption of the landlord port model b strengthens the governance of port authorities boards and c promotes competition between and within ports in part through transparent and competitive concession bidding
