

SAP Smart Form Architecture

Smart Forms are meant to output application data in a form format. The architecture of Smart Forms keeps separate application data retrieval from form definition.

When smart forms are activated, it generates a function module, similar to a regular function module, that can be called from an application program, also known as a driver program.

The interface of this generated function module passes the data to be output from the application program to the form. When defining smart form, we define form interface to transfer application data to form definition. The interface of the generated function module is a replication of the form interface.
