

Thermovision® systems

Fire protection of stockyards, industrial and security use

Enelex thermal imaging systems are used in a number of applications including fire protection of coal stockyards and belt conveyors, product analysis and surveillance applications. The systems enable motion detection, temperature level detection, temperature trend monitoring in large or outdoor areas as well as advanced analysis based on application needs.

Enelex has long-term experience with installing the thermal imaging systems in demanding conditions such as coal storage yards, waste sites and other facilities, mostly in the power industry. Most of our applications consist of thermal imaging fire prevention systems for monitoring surface temperatures of stored materials and of outdoor fire prevention systems in outdoor areas with high risk of fire.

We use our extensive experience with thermal imaging applications in designing new systems, and prior to starting design, we verify feasibility using the portable systems and studies, for example "Coal Selfignition Process Study".

Based on the customer's needs, we propose a solution, draw up a price bid and project documentation, deliver and install the technology, train users and provide the servicing and maintenance.
