Coolidge,2011-11-01 There have been many books movies and even TV commercials featuring Neandertals some serious some comical But what was it really like to be a Neandertal How were their lives similar to or different from ours In How to Think Like a Neandertal archaeologist Thomas Wynn and psychologist Frederick L Coolidge team up to provide a brilliant account of the mental life of Neandertals drawing on the most recent fossil and archaeological remains Indeed some Neandertal remains are not fossilized allowing scientists to recover samples of their genes one specimen had the gene for red hair and more provocatively all had a gene called FOXP2 which is thought to be related to speech Given the differences between their faces and ours their voices probably sounded a bit different and the range of consonants and vowels they could generate might have been different But they could talk and they had a large perhaps huge vocabulary words for places routes techniques individuals and emotions Extensive archaeological remains of stone tools and living sites and yes they did often live in caves indicate that Neandertals relied on complex technical procedures and spent most of their lives in small family groups The authors sift the evidence that Neandertals had a symbolic culture looking at their treatment of corpses the use of fire and possible body coloring and conclude that they probably did not have a sense of the supernatural The book explores the brutal nature of their lives especially in northwestern Europe where men and women with spears hunted together for mammoths and woolly rhinoceroses They were pain tolerant very likely taciturn and not easy
