| In this lesson, student will be working toward editing and producing a collection of expressive texts while exploring the conventions and literary devices typical to a specific poem type.                                                                             |                        |                                                         |                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |                                                          |                                                                         |
| Students' background knowledge:Students have already curated five collections of poetry in this unit. This lesson is focused on introducing cascade poetry, and how to write one. This builds on their knowledge of rhyming schemes, rhythm and poetry conventions. |                        |                                                         |                  | Learning objectives:Students should be able to use language and time appropriate to the text's purpose, as well as employ literary devices of a cascade poem to convey emotions.                                                                                                                         |  |                                                          |                                                                         |
| Teacher focus:During this lesson, I will be focusing on encouraging student motivation and building relationships with the students.                                                                                                                                |                        |                                                         |                  | Learning environment:Students will be in their usual classroom. The room is large and open, which allows the students to work independently and comfortably. The learning environment will be left as is, to ensure students feel safe in a familiar setting.                                            |  |                                                          |                                                                         |

They should have also submitted their poems to the class collection. In this process, students should also be able to collaborate and assemble their classmates' work into a cohesive book. |  |                                                          |                                                                         |

I will need to prepare prompting questions that include themes and topics that are accessible to them, in order for them to write a poem. I shall also use this time to assess their motivation and excitement for my upcoming unit.To cater for individual differences, I shall move to each student independently in the class.                                                                                                            | Students shall spend the majority of this lesson working on their cascade poems.If the students have finished their cascade poems, they should then copy it onto the google doc for the student curators to edit and finalize.                |

| My initial plan to greet the students in the morning did not eventuate as some students had arrived early. I then decided to go into the classroom and talk to the students as a whole about their week-end, and their motivation for the class. Jose did not introduce the class as we both decided that I could lead the class from the beginning.Although all students completed the task, it was to varying degrees of successfulness. Some students struggled to understand the structure of the poem and write a poem to their own liking. The worksheet was not used by all students, but considerably helped those who did. There were no major modifications in this lesson as things went accordingly to plan.An aspect of the lesson that could be better improved would be the introduction and instruction for the students. The opening of the lesson was well received, but needs reevaluation to be efficient for both myself and the students. |              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
