Discrepancies notwithstanding, the presence of any of the aforementioned questions on the exam after each question has been noted above, regardless of the subject area given. Efforts are ongoing to ensure that correct answers have been noted with appropriate confidence and marking each item has been determined accurately.

Mathematical models describing the propagation of these signals are often formulated in terms of wave equations that are solved numerically in a discrete manner. This is done by discretizing the spatial domain and the time domain. The resulting equations are then solved using numerical methods such as finite difference, finite element, or spectral methods. The accuracy of the numerical solution depends on the discretization scheme and the numerical method used. The numerical solution is then compared with the analytical solution to assess the accuracy of the numerical method.
