

SERVICE LEVEL AGREEMENT

1. INTRODUCTION

This Service Level Agreement (SLA or Agreement) document describes the general scope and nature of the services the Company will provide in relation to the System Software (RMS Operating System and related components) used by the Customer.

This document and associated attachments is unique per Customer and defines the support services to be provisioned during the period specified and the associated fee schedules.

This document is pursuant to the License Agreement under which the Customer uses the System Software.

1.1 DEFINITIONS

In this Agreement and associated documents, the following expressions have these meanings set against them:

Customer	<customer name>
Company	Datapoint U.S.A., Inc.
Application Software	Other programs operated on the Company's system where either: i) supplied by the Company under separate agreement with the Customer ii) supplied by a third party or developed by the Customer for his own use, insofar as they are intended to integrate with or use System Software or Application Software previously supplied by the Company.
Assignment	The response by the Company to a request for Support assistance
Fault Condition	A fault condition is one in which the expected operation of a product fails due to improper design. A fault condition would not include requests by the Customer for functional enhancements nor modifications of the existing design to overcome limitations of a particular product.
Pre-booked (Ad-Hoc) Services	Services requested by the Customer which are not included within the scope of the Agreement. Additional charges will apply based upon the Service Fee Schedule section.
Support	Technical expertise in use of the System Software that is provided by the Company's staff or agents
