Respected Director,

It is stated that I am the manager of the operations department. I have given my 10 years to this company, and I am a very proud employee. I have delivered my projects that were exceptional and were highly appreciated by clients. My department runs smoothly under my command and no complaints have ever been logged about my people. We work as a team in every project and that is the key to our success.

In view of the latest project assigned to my department, I would like to request for the hiring of additional staff for my department. Current members of my department are already working on ongoing projects, and they cannot be burdened beyond the limit, so they will not be able to cope with additional responsibilities related to the latest project as its deadline is near. I, therefore, request you to hire 3 employees in the department.

With the influx of more manpower, responsibilities will be shared, and work would be up to the mark.

Regards

Operations Manager,
Daniel Ephron.

Introduction

The operation department of our company is in dire need of expansion due to the heavy influx of very lengthy projects. All the members of my department are already occupied with previous projects and to meet the deadlines of new projects, it is important to hire extra help. Due to incoming projects, meetings are conducted for discussion with the clients. Such meetings consume a day's work of my department as they have to prepare proposals for each project and also make amendments according to the likings of clients. It would be a wise move to assign new projects to new members with fresh minds engaging new, thrilling ideas that can be incorporated into projects.
