

Religious Terrorism

Terrorism in the name of religion has become the predominant mode of political violence in the modern world. This is not to suggest that it is the only mode because nationalism and ideology remain as potent catalysts for extremist behavior. However, religious extremism has become a central issue for the global community.

In the modern era, religious terrorism has increased in its frequency, scale of violence, and global reach. At the same time, a religious decline has occurred in several territories. The old advantages of class conflict, institutional structures, and secular nationalism have been challenged by a new and vigorous infusion of nationalism, ideologies. Governments everywhere suspect that religious violence has become widespread among populations living in desperate situations that do not permit demands for reform or other expressions of dissent.

What is religious terrorism? What are its fundamental attributes? Religious terrorism is a type of political violence motivated by an absolute belief that an unbearable grievance has occurred—and is commanded—by sacred violence for the greater glory of the faith. Acts committed in the name of the faith with its legitimacy for the unbearable grievance and perhaps rewarded as an offering, its essential role's religious faith legitimizes violence as long as each believer is an expression of the will of one's deity. Table 4.1 presents a model that compares the fundamental characteristics of religious and secular terrorism.

The discussion in this chapter will review the following:

- Historical perspectives on religious violence
- The practice of religious terrorism
- Trends and projections
