1. Interdependent (collectivist) vs. Individualistic (individualistic): In collectivist societies, where the individual is viewed as part of a larger social fabric, the group takes precedence over the individual. In individualistic societies, where the individual is viewed as separate from the group, the individual takes precedence. This cultural difference affects how people perceive and respond to social norms and expectations. For example, in collectivist cultures, people may be more likely to conform to group norms and expectations, while in individualistic cultures, people may be more likely to assert their individuality and challenge authority.
