

TEACHING DEMONSTRATION REFLECTION PAPER

The very first time when I heard about teaching demonstration, I felt so many emotions, excited, nervous, and afraid. I went through the emotion of excitement because it indirectly told me that my real teaching is approaching. I will become a teacher soon. Day passed by, I started to feel nervous when I think about what to teach in the skill of grammar, although this skill is my favorite subject. After doing plentiful research, I got an interesting grammar point to teach which is "Dangling Modifier". Today, therefore, as the demonstration comes to an end, I would like to reflect back on some of the bittersweet memories, lesson-learned for improving.

To begin with, I was quite fortunate because I got grammar to teach and I had to teach on the third and fourth week of the practicum, which meant I had more time to observe my classmates; their best practices, and I had more time to plan my lesson. Recognizing this opportunity, as I was observing my peers, I noted down the methodologies they were using to engage their students, how they presented their language points, what kinds of questions they would ask to challenge their students to think, so on and so forth. To me, without the observations of my peers, my demonstration would have been an awkward experience since I could not relate my experiences to theirs. Moreover, after seeing so many best practices, I could personalize them to my teaching in the upcoming week, and this would allow me to be more flexible in my teaching and to be aware of challenges that might present during my teaching practices.

As my turn arrived, I've already planned my lessons and sent it to my friends for feedback. It's one of the crucial steps in teaching because in order to be well-prepared for the class, we have to plan it first and foresee the possibilities of errors, and that crucially helps us a lot before the actual teaching. I am not going to walk you through the procedure of my teaching; however, I am going to tell you what I have learned from this session. Overall, I could say it went well, students got something new as I expected it to be, but there were a few issues that happened during my session. I would say I was too ambitious and nervous in recording my video of teaching. You can guess it now; I lose my concentration from students respond to the recorder. I cannot catch students' answers and cannot write all that they said, which made some of them feel a bit disappointed. I have realized that students are our motivation as a teacher. Though it is one of the other factors, I could say it was really important to me. Without their participation and cooperation, my teaching would not go so smoothly with a satisfactory result and very few technical errors. Additionally, I had a
