

Are you're getting observed...

We know classroom observations can be intimidating. There are some frequently asked questions about CLASS observations, what they measure, and how the data can be used.

Q: What is CLASS?

A: The Classroom Assessment Scoring System (CLASS) is a research-based tool that measures the effectiveness of classroom interactions among teachers and children. These early interactions promote children's social, emotional, and cognitive development and lead to better long outcomes.

Q: What happens during a CLASS observation?

A: The CLASS observer takes about 15-20 min to enter and take notes on the interactions among teachers and children for periods of 15-20 minutes. Then, they enter a longer session. They repeat this for 2-3 cycles. Observers do their best to stay unobtrusive and avoid interacting with classroom children.

Q: Why am I being observed?

A: Research shows that CLASS measures interactions that predict child outcomes. So, observations support the central mission. This data might be important for program monitoring, improvement, or part of planning or ongoing professional development. CLASS also is a program practice or assessment to better understand the purpose or to learn who might use data from your observation.

Q: How often I prepare?

A: You may want to let children know that there will be a visitor in the classroom. Otherwise, you do not need to do anything to prepare. It's better to be nervous, led by the observer, instead of panic during the observation. The goal of the CLASS observation is to capture what the classroom is like on a typical day.

Q: How long do CLASS observations last?

A: Observations are single day classroom visits about 15 hours. They capture interactions across a variety of classroom experiences. Observations may be planned when children are in classes that day.

Q: Who will be conducting my CLASS observation?

A: CLASS observations are conducted by Certified CLASS Observers. To become certified, observers must attend a workshop. They also complete and pass an annual reliability test to show that they can use the CLASS measure fairly and accurately.

Q: How are the results of a CLASS observation used?

A: Observations identify the highly effective and less effective interactions in your classroom. With objective information, you can identify the changes in the interactions that make more for children. Data from an observation can also inform professional development needs, for you or the group, designed as a follow-up to a CLASS observation should be an informative experience for teachers.
