Thus, BIRAC's Policy Advisory Group has provided the government with an independent, non-partisan, and non-ideological perspective. The members of the Policy Advisory Group have been selected from a cross-section of groups and the House has recognized the independence and objectivity of BIRAC's program as a condition of their support. Also, BIRAC's role should be seen as different from that of other development agencies, such as the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank, in that it is not a government agency, and it does not have a mandate to provide financial support. The international community has accepted, albeit reluctantly, that it is necessary to support an independent and non-partisan group to assist the government without the government's interference. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) has also accepted this arrangement.
