

As a subject of study, microwave engineering is one of the more traditional fields of electronics and communication engineering disciplines. However, with progress in technology and manufacturing expertise, measurements of microwave parameters have gained new heights in terms of state of the art concepts and technologies. This book aims at bringing traditional concepts with modern technologies of microwave communication engineering. The text is designed for undergraduate course in microwave engineering of JNTU(A). Photographs of microwave components have been added. All the chapters have questions of objective type with answers at the end. As a text book of ready and concise reference, this contribution is expected to help students in building up their knowledge in the respective area.
