Questioning Allegiance Liz Jackson,2019-05-01 Education about living in society and in the world is a vital task of schools Yet such civic education is not always critically examined and few among us have been encouraged to reflect on our civic education experiences Around the world one s civic education most often looks like a black box How it works is unclear When human harm violence and oppression can be seen in a wide variety of contexts it is worth critically examining civic education Could it be that civic education is not playing a helpful role in society Can it be done differently and better As one reflects on the contemporary social world it is helpful to examine the assumptions surrounding education for living together to think about current modes and possible alternatives Otherwise one might end up promoting allegiance to civic and partisan entities which are themselves black boxes the nation the people failing to notice when and how what goes on in civic education is morally questionable This book aims to elucidate some of the black box of civic education and focuses on some of its main operations across contexts Offering a new framework for students and academics this book questions existing thinking and shifts the focus of attention from the right balance to strike between local national and global allegiances to the more fundamental question of what counts as local national and global and what might be involved in cultivating allegiances to them It looks at allegiance to not just transnational but also sub global civilisations and it problematises the notion of the local community in new ways This book is the 2020 AESA Critics Choice Book Award Winner
