Test-wiseness and Background Knowledge Daniel Roberson,2020 When given a multiple choice test over unfamiliar material students may score significantly above chance levels This performance may be explained by prior knowledge of the material or by test wiseness determining the correct answer by using cues present in the test Participants answered questions from an introductory psychology test bank in two formats a question stem with a single alternative and a traditional four alternative multiple choice reporting what sources of information they used to answer each question For the single alternative condition participants had an accuracy of 42 2% 17 2% higher than the base chance of 25% with an average accuracy of 40 75% for the multiple choice condition Participants who stated they had previously learnt the material showed no significant difference in accuracy than those who stated they had guessed These findings suggest that tests may have inflated scores which reflect test wiseness and prior knowledge more than formal learning of the test materials

An Empirical Examination of the Impact of Item Parameters on IRT Information Functions in Mixed Format Tests Wai Yan Wendy Lam, 2012. IRT also referred to as modern test theory offers many advantages over CTT based methods in test development. Specifically an IRT information function has the capability to build a test that has the desired precision of measurement for any defined proficiency scale when a sufficient number of test items are available. This feature is extremely useful when the information is used for decision making for instance whether an examinee attains certain mastery level. Computerized adaptive testing CAT is one of the many examples using IRT information functions in test construction. The purposes of this study were as follows: 1 to examine the consequences of improving the test quality through the addition of more discriminating items with different item formats; 2 to examine the effect of having a test where its difficulty does not align with the ability level of the intended population; 3 to investigate the change in decision consistency and decision accuracy; and 4 to understand changes in expected information when test quality is either improved or degraded using both empirical and simulated data. Main findings from the study were as follows: 1 increasing the discriminating power of any types of items generally increased the level of information; however sometimes it could bring adverse effect to the extreme ends of the ability continuum; 2 it was important to have more items that were targeted at the population of interest otherwise no matter how good the quality of the items may be they were of less value in test development when they were not targeted to the distribution of candidate ability or at the cutscores 3 decision consistency DC Kappa statistic and decision accuracy DA increased with better quality items 4 DC and Kappa were negatively affected when difficulty of the test did not match with the ability of the intended population however the effect was less severe if the test was easier than needed 5 tests with more better quality items lowered false positive FP and false negative FN rate at the cutscores 6 when test difficulty did not match with the ability of the target examinees in general both FP and FN rates increased 7 polytomous items tended to yield more information than dichotomously scored items regardless of the discriminating parameter and difficulty of the item and 8 the more score categories an item had the more information it could provide Findings from this thesis should help testing agencies and practitioners to have better understanding of the item parameters on item and test information functions This understanding is crucial for the improvement of the item bank quality and ultimately on how to build better tests that could provide more accurate proficiency classifications However at the same time item writers should be conscientious about the fact that the item information function is merely a statistical tool for building a good test other criteria should also be considered for example content balancing and content validity
