

I have read the book "Tomorrow, when the war began", by John Marsden. The book is about seven teenagers, Ellie, Lee, Fi, Homer, Corrie, Chris and Robyn that lived in and around a city called Wirawee. It was the end of their summer holiday, when Ellie, the main character, wanted to do something fun together with her friends before the school starts. She wanted to go camping out in the bush, far out in the countryside, to a place called Hell. Everyone in the group was really engaged in this adventure. They packed their food and recourses and then went out in the bushes.

At the same time as the group were out camping, the rest of the city was celebrating a special day called Commemoration day. Every year a show was held and almost everyone around the city was there to have a good time. At the Commemoration day there were contests, funny attractions and different kind of performance. But the group of teenager wanted to get away from all the noise and have a fun time together.

They borrowed a car and drove far away to a place called Tailor Stitch, they parked the car and began to walk. After several hours of walking they finally arrived to Hell. Hell was not a ugly, mean place, as we may think, it was more like a little paradise with many flowers, beautiful water and the best was the calmness. There were no exhaust from cars, no big machines, just a group of teenagers and the sound of the nature.

One night, Ellie woke up and heard a lot of noise. It was many low-flying army airplanes that was heading straight to the city. She thought it was some kind of airshow for the Commemoration day and fell back to sleep. The morning after when the group were talking they started to discuss about the airplanes flying over them during the night. Everyone had noticed the airplanes and they had been flying against the city the whole night. They hoped that they were just for a airshow for the Commemoration day, but I think that everyone had a bad feeling about this.

When they came back from camping, a few days later, they first stopped at Ellies house. Their first sight is that all of Ellies four dogs is dead. No one is home and everything looks like a mess. They were all in shocked and they thought that Homer's parents might be home and know whats going on. They went home to Homer and no one was there too. They started to get a bad feeling about this. Because of all the army airplanes and now empty houses they had to assume the worst. Their country had been invaded while they were out camping. They think that their parents might be somewhere in the city. Since Ellie and Homer lived a bit outside the town, they had no idea what's going on in the city.

They decided that they had to find out what's really happening. They need to get to the city and se what's going on. It would be too risky to take the car and therefore they walked. They carefully went closer to the city where the Commemoration day was held and there they saw all these huge tents with thousands of people around and there was soldiers armed with guns ready to shoot at them. This book is about the group of teenager trying to save their parents and everyone in the city. They will come in contact with different kinds of problem, some of them very deadly.

My favorite character was Lee. He seemed to be a very generous, smart and funny person. He was helping his parents taking care of their restaurant and he was also very good in school. My impression of him is that he like to do something all the time, he doesn't like to just laying in the couch doing nothing. It is a little bit like me. I don't like to do nothing. I always need to have something to do.

I really like the part of the book when they arrived to Hell. The beautiful descriptions about how the place look. It sounds like a beautiful little paradise. The perfect place to have a fantastic time, especially if you are with some of your best friends. I can just imagine how fun they must had. Swimming in the water, laying round a campfire and talking about memories. This was my favorite part of the book, but my least favorite part must be when all the airplanes flew over them in the middle of the night. They must have started to hink other thoughts then a airshow for the Commemoration day. Someone must have thought that they were heading straight to the city,
