

Build Your Own Bible Study

Adapted from Tools for Mentoring Bible Module by Jory Schroeder

Use the Study Questions Personally

The “Study Questions List” below can assist you as you study the Bible. The list includes observation, interpretation, and application types of questions. When you study Scripture, you drill down deeper into a smaller portion. Generally, use several observation questions, a couple of interpretation questions, and choose one application. Observe as much in the passage as your time and interest allow. Let the Holy Spirit speak to you. Do something to apply what you read so that the Bible transforms your life.

Use the Study Questions in a Bible Discussion

You can use the “Study Questions List” below to create Bible discussions for a small group, as well. First, study the short passage yourself as described above, letting the Holy Spirit speak to you personally. Next, answer two questions: (1) What is the main point or idea of the passage? (2) What do you want your group members to do to act on the main point—a specific action to apply the truth? Then, aiming the discussion toward the main point, choose a few observation questions, a couple of interpretation questions, and one application question from the list that addresses question (2)—what you want members to do.

For example, use questions from the “Study Questions List” below for a discussion of Romans 8:35-39. Some observation questions adapted from the list below might be: What is the main point of this passage? What situations are listed that cannot separate you from God’s love? An interpretation question might be: What issue in your situation does this address? An application question might be: What does God promise in this passage? How specifically will you apply the promise today—how will it change your thinking?

Study Questions List

Observe: What does it say? (Hendricks 124-125)

- Who is the God-inspired author? The author’s audience? Any other people in the passage?
- Observe the setting: Where are they? When is it taking place? Who is around? What action occurs?
- What type of literature is this?
  - Narrative, epistle (letter), parable, poetry, prophecy, or exposition (teaching or explanation)?
- Notice the context of the passage within the surrounding paragraphs and the book.
