Defining Conic Sections

- A conic section (or simply conic) is a curve obtained as the intersection of the surface of a cone with a plane. The three types of conic sections are the hyperbola, the parabola, and the ellipse. The circle is type of ellipse, and is sometimes considered to be a fourth type of conic section.

Key Points:

- A conic section (or simply conic) is a curve obtained as the intersection of the surface of a cone with a plane; the three types are parabolas, ellipses, and hyperbolas.
- A conic section can be graphed on a coordinate plane.
- vertex: An extreme point on a conic section.
- nappe: One half of a double cone.
- conic section: Any curve formed by the intersection of a plane with a cone of two nappes.

Conic sections are generated by the intersection of a plane with a cone.

- If the plane is parallel to the axis of revolution (the y-axis), then the conic section is a hyperbola.
- If the plane is parallel to the generating line, the conic section is a parabola.
- If the plane is perpendicular to the axis of revolution, the conic section is a circle.
- If the plane intersects one nappe at an angle to the axis (other than 90), then the conic section is an ellipse.

A cone and conic sections: The nappes and the four conic sections. Each conic is determined by the angle the plane makes with the axis of the cone.
