2. Is my essay well-organized?

In this case, the reviewer of your essay should check your thesis statement and topic sentences in the body paragraphs to make sure that they directly answer the question being asked. There should be adequate use of transition words and other types of signal words that show how your ideas are connected. Your reviewer should pay particular attention to the key junctures of your paper which can be especially troublesome: end of the first paragraph, beginning and end of each paragraph, and concluding paragraph. There should be a strong sense of unity in all these key junctures.
