Industrial and Trade Policy Reform in Developing Countries Ramesh Adhikari, Colin H. Kirkpatrick, John Weiss, 1992 World Development Report 2008

World Bank, 2007-10-15 The world's demand for food is expected to double within the next 50 years while the natural resources that sustain agriculture will become increasingly scarce degraded and vulnerable to the effects of climate change In many poor countries agriculture accounts for at least 40 percent of GDP and 80 percent of employment At the same time about 70 percent of the world's poor live in rural areas and most depend on agriculture for their livelihoods World

Development Report 2008 seeks to assess where when and how agriculture can be an effective instrument for economic development especially development that favors the poor It examines several broad questions How has agriculture changed in developing countries in the past 20 years What are the important new challenges and opportunities for agriculture Which new sources of agricultural growth can be captured cost effectively in particular in poor countries with large agricultural sectors as in Africa How can agricultural growth be made more effective for poverty reduction How can governments facilitate the transition of large populations out of agriculture without simply transferring the burden of rural poverty to urban areas How can the natural resource endowment for agriculture be protected How can agriculture's negative environmental effects be contained This year's report marks the 30th year the World Bank has been publishing the World Development Report

The Imperative of Development Geoffrey Gertz, Homi Kharas, Johannes F. Linn, 2017-09-12 The achievements and legacy of the Wolfensohn Center for Development at Brookings The Imperative of Development highlights the research and policy analysis produced by the Wolfensohn Center for Development at Brookings The Center which operated from 2006 to 2011 was the first home at Brookings for research on international development It sought to help identify effective solutions to key development challenges in order to create a more prosperous and stable world Founded by James and Elaine Wolfensohn the Center's mission was to create knowledge that leads to action with real scaled up and lasting development impact. This volume reviews the Center's achievements and lasting legacy combining highlights of its most important research with new essays that examine the context and impact of that research. Six primary research streams of the Wolfensohn Center's work are highlighted in The Imperative of Development: the shifting structure of the world economy in the twenty-first century, the challenge of scaling up the impact of development interventions, the effectiveness of development assistance, how to promote economic and social inclusion for Middle Eastern youth, the case for investing in early child development, and the need for global governance reform. In each chapter, a scholar associated with the particular research topic provides an overview of the issue and its broader context, then describes the Center's work on the topic and the subsequent influence and impact of these efforts. The Imperative of Development chronicles the growth and expansion of the first center for development research in Brookings's 100-year history and traces how the seeds of this initiative continue to bear fruit.

Reforming Antitrust Alan J. Devlin, 2021-08-19 Industrial consolidation, digital platforms, and changing political views have spurred debate about the interplay between public and private power in the United States and have created a bipartisan appetite for potential antitrust reform that would mark the most profound shift in US competition policy in the past half century. While neo-Brandeisians call for a reawakening of antitrust in the form of a return to structuralism and a concomitant rejection of economic analysis founded on competitive effects, proponents of the status quo look on this state of affairs with alarm. Scrutinizing the latest evidence, Alan J. Devlin finds a middle ground: US antitrust laws warrant revision, he argues, but with far more nuance than current debates suggest. He offers a new vision of antitrust reform achieved by refining our enforcement policies and jettisoning an unwarranted obsession with minimizing errors of economic analysis.

Reforming European Welfare States Jochen Clasen, 2005-08-25 Welfare state reform has been a focus of domestic policy making in many European countries in recent years. Representing almost a third of the EU population and two distinctive models of European welfare states, this book compares development in British and German social policy over the past 25 years. During this time, four periods of conservative governments were followed by centre-left administrations in both countries. Moreover, the respective economic and social positions of the two countries have been reversed. Adverse socio-economic developments have contributed to the waning of the erstwhile appeal of Germany as a role model of welfare capitalism. By contrast, the UK is seen by some as being on its way to gaining such a position. These trends provide an analytically intriguing background for a systematic contextualized comparison of reform processes in the two welfare states. Concentrating on three core domains of social policy, the book argues that unemployment support and public pension programmes have been subjected to retrenchment as well as to restructuring. By contrast, family policies have been extended in both countries. However, patterns of retrenchment and restructuring differ across countries and programmes. In order to explain similarities and variations, the book emphasizes the relevance of three sets of factors: shifts in party policy preferences and power relations, three institutional variables, and contingent factors impinging on policy direction and profiles Within pension policy the relevance of different institutional characteristics and the respective balance between private and public forms of retirement suggest that the concept of path dependence is particularly instructive By contrast differences in programme structures and their role within national political economies prove to be most relevant for the understanding of changes in unemployment support policy Less institutionally embedded and expanding the trajectories of family policies have to be seen in the context of dynamic party policy preferences
