

Sectionalism and The Civil War

In the year 1861 the civil war began in the United States, the north and south declared war on each other over authority and the law to end slavery. Even though both northerners and southerners believed they fought against tyranny and oppression, Southerners defend their own right to self-government and Northerners focused on the oppression of slaves. It was then when everything would change the future of our nation and the way they saw the world. The union party was led by Abraham Lincoln and the Confederacy was led by Jefferson Davis, it was not a regular war and it went onto costing the lives of 625,000 individuals during the entire war.

The American civil war had by far the greater impact on the American society and polity more than any other even in the entire history of the United States. It was one of the deadliest wars that would go on to take the lives of 2% of the population during that time. Comparing it to today's numbers the lives lost to that war would reach 6 million, which is more than any other war fought by the United States of America. In the battle of Sharpsburg, Maryland in September the casualties of American soldiers exceeded the amount of casualties the United States had in the 19th century combined. One must ask as to why did the confederate and the union fought each other with such ferocity during that time.

It all started at the end of the Mexican-American war which left an unanswered question for the people of the country on whether the new seceded land from Mexico would be pro slavery or against. It is here where a major turning point that would go onto changing the history of the nation forever developed. There were people in the congress from both sides that had different ideas as to how to deal with the territories won from Mexico. On one side there were the northerner congress men arguing that all the new territory should exclude any kind of slavery, while the southern congressmen argue that their slave property into any state or territory in the United States. Then California decides to join the union as a free state and the balance of free and slave states would begin to shift. Years later to try to maintain the peace and from keeping the south from seceding from the nation a set of compromises were passed in congress to calm everyone down and one of the main one was the Missouri compromise, but it was only a means to postpone the final showdown between the north and the south. The Kansas-Nebraska act of 1854 would be the final compromise that would be passed and the one that would fully separate the north and the south because it would allow them to decide for themselves using popular sovereignty whether be free or slave states.

All of those events would be deciding points for the civil war to happen because there was always a feeling of distrust between the pro-slave and anti-slave states after decades of division between both of them. By the time Abraham Lincoln became president, the and nationalism     Beating Plowshares Into Swords Paul A. C. Koistinen, 1996 Koistinen describes how an undeveloped preindustrial economy forced Americans to fight defensive wars of attrition like the Revolution and the War of 1812 By the time of the Mexican War however a gradually maturing economy allowed the United States to use a much more offensive minded strategy to achieve its goals The book concludes with an exhaustive examination of the Civil War a conflict that both anticipated and differed from the total wars of the industrialized era Koistinen demonstrates that the North relied upon its enormous economic might to overwhelm the Confederacy through a strategy of annihilation while the South bungled its own strategy of attrition by failing to mobilize effectively a much less developed economy     Life among the Anthros and

Other Essays Clifford Geertz, 2012-08-26 An incomparable retrospective of writings by one of the world's great anthropologists Clifford Geertz 1926-2006 was perhaps the most influential anthropologist of our time but his influence extended far beyond his field to encompass all facets of contemporary life Nowhere were his gifts for directness humor and steady revelation more evident than in the pages of the New York Review of Books where for nearly four decades he shared his acute vision of the world in all its peculiarity This book brings together the finest of Geertz's review essays from the New York Review along with a representative selection of later pieces written at the height of his powers some that first appeared in periodicals such as Dissent others never before published This collection exemplifies Geertz's extraordinary range of concerns beginning with his first essay for the Review in 1967 in which he reviews with muffled hilarity the anthropologist Bronislaw Malinowski This book includes Geertz's unflinching meditations on Western academia's encounters with the non-Western world and on the shifting and clashing places of societies in the world generally Geertz writes eloquently and arrestingly about such major figures as Gandhi Foucault and Genet and on topics as varied as Islam globalization feminism and the failings of nationalism Life among the Anthros and Other Essays demonstrates Geertz's uncommon wisdom and consistently keen and hopeful humor confirming his status as one of our most important and enduring public intellectuals
