

Management and Financial Reporting

Segment Reporting

According to IASB Accounting Standards Board's Standard 14 (2009, "the revised Segments" the objective of segment reporting is to provide information about the different business activities, products or services, regions, and other different segments, which management will report separately. This issue is discussed in paragraphs 1-4 of the standard. First, paragraph 1 discusses the objective of segment reporting. Second, paragraph 2 discusses the requirements for segments that must be reported. Third, paragraph 3 discusses the requirements for segments that are not reported.

IASB 14 defines operating segments as components of an entity. These segments are business activities from which it may earn revenues and incur expenses (including expenses incurred by the segments in the course of their operations). Operating segments are regularly reviewed by the entity's chief operating decision maker to decide the business's future direction. It is not sufficient for the segments to be reported for performance and financial information to be available.

IASB 14 also defines the following segments:

When a company has identified its operating segments, it should also identify its financial reporting segments. Management must identify which segments are reportable separately. Management information must be reported separately for each operating segment that meets one or more quantitative thresholds. However, it may be that not all operating segments meet these thresholds. In such cases, management may be required to report separately the segments that do not meet these thresholds. For example, a small company may have three segments, each of which meets the threshold of an operating segment, but each of which is not a separate financial reporting segment. In such cases, management must identify the segments that do not meet these thresholds and report them separately. Management must also identify the segments that do not meet these thresholds and report them separately.

- (i) The nature of the products and services provided by the operating segments;
- (ii) The nature of the production process;
- (iii) The type of sales of products;
- (iv) The distribution methods;
- (v) the applicable laws and regulations of the operating segments;

Segments must be identified by the chief operating decision maker of the entity. Management must identify the segments that do not meet these thresholds and report them separately.
