The Effect of Self-Esteem on Student Achievement

Serdar Körük

15.1 Introduction

Self-esteem is defined as the set of positive or negative evaluations of individuals about their own selves (Rosenberg 1965). Self and self-esteem constitute two different dimensions of personality. The self represents the cognitive part of the personality, whereas self-esteem represents the affective and psychologic dimension. The personality traits of the individuals, their physical features, abilities, skills, social relations, feelings and their ideas about their academic or professional performance and the satisfaction they feel as a result of these ideas, are included in the concept of self-esteem (Yılmaz 2000; İzgiç et al. 2001). A high level of perceived satisfaction indicates that the individual has high self-esteem, whereas a low level of satisfaction indicates low self-esteem. Özkan (1994) defined people with high self-esteem as individuals who are successful in academic and professional areas, who can handle stress, who can establish social and close relations and who have a high level of vitality and enjoyment. At the same time, he defined people with low self-esteem as individuals who have a low level of vitality and enjoyment, who are not self-confident, who feel shame and feelings of worthlessness and who feel inadequate in terms of successes and skills.

The formation of self-image in individuals starts in their babyhood and early childhood periods through the verbal and non-verbal signals that they receive from their parents who are the primary objects of connection (Demiriz and Öğretir 2007). Towards the early childhood period, when the cognitive level is developed, the baby starts to create his or her self-esteem by evaluating his or her physical properties, abilities, strengths and weaknesses. Nine months old babies start to realize that they are mentally different from each other, and they develop their verbal self when they are eighteen months old. The progress of infants' cognitive

Self-Esteem Research, Theory, and Practice Christopher J. Mruk, 2006-05-09 Print CourseSmart Extending Self-Esteem Theory and Research Timothy J. Owens, Sheldon Stryker, Norman Goodman, 2006-11-02 Self esteem is an academic and popular phenomenon vigorously researched and debated sometimes imbued with magical qualities other times vilified as the bane of the West's preoccupation with self Though thousands of articles have been devoted to the topic and bookshops work to feed the public's appetite for advice on revealing enhancing and maintaining self esteem conflicting claims and findings have placed the field in disarray In a very real sense self esteem is a victim of its own popularity This book seeks to add clarity to a concept earlier examined by such notable self theorists as Morris Rosenberg but eminently worthy of re examination and extension We do this by asking some leading thinkers on self esteem theory measurement and application to assess what we know about self esteem and link it to important aspects of society and the human experience Abstracts of Research Papers - American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance, 1987

How inclusion is defined and applied between schools, districts and even countries can vary markedly, thus an international understanding of inclusion is urgently needed. Experts from several countries in different regions present the latest research in the field of inclusion and provide practices and strategies guided by empirical research to address some of these issues. Schools are contextual organisations that represent the broader society, culture and values in which they reside. Thus, how inclusion is practised at the society level has an implication on schools. The way we think about inclusion has shifted dramatically in the last decade; we now recognise that inclusion represents a broad spectrum of racial, ethnic, cultural and sexual diversity that is seen in almost all modern schools. This book presents international perspectives and research on inclusion, belonging and equity, to work towards a more consistent, collaborative and global understanding. Health Sciences Literature Review Made Easy Judith Garrard, 2016-08-04 Health Sciences Literature Review Made Easy: The Matrix Method Fifth Edition describes the practical and useful methods for reviewing scientific literature in the health sciences.
