Abstract: In this paper, we study the asymptotic behavior of the spectral density of the sample covariance matrix of a stationary Gaussian process with a long-range dependence structure. The spectral density is assumed to be of the form  $f(\lambda) \sim |\lambda|^{-\alpha} L(\lambda)$  as  $|\lambda| \rightarrow 0$ , where  $\alpha \in (0, 1)$  and  $L(\lambda)$  is a slowly varying function. The asymptotic behavior of the spectral density is studied in the case of a stationary Gaussian process with a long-range dependence structure. The asymptotic behavior of the spectral density is studied in the case of a stationary Gaussian process with a long-range dependence structure.

Abstract

Abstract: This article presents empirical results on environmental protection and sustainable development for the emerging and transition economies within the European Union. The results show that the environmental protection and sustainable development are positively related to the economic growth and the human capital accumulation. The results also show that the environmental protection and sustainable development are negatively related to the income inequality and the income per capita. The results suggest that the environmental protection and sustainable development are important for the economic growth and the human capital accumulation in the emerging and transition economies.
