1. Identify the problem. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the symptoms and the context in which they are occurring.
2. Define the problem. Once the problem is identified, it is important to define it clearly. This involves specifying the scope of the problem and the objectives of the investigation.
3. Develop a plan. A plan of action should be developed to address the problem. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken and the resources that will be required.
4. Implement the plan. The plan should be implemented, and the results should be monitored. This involves carrying out the steps that have been identified in the plan.
5. Evaluate the results. Once the plan has been implemented, the results should be evaluated. This involves comparing the results with the objectives and identifying any areas for improvement.

THEORY The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the strength and muscle mass of the lower extremities in healthy, sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program. The CON group performed no resistance training. The RT group showed significant increases in strength and muscle mass of the lower extremities compared to the CON group. The RT group also showed significant increases in strength and muscle mass of the lower extremities compared to the CON group. The RT group showed significant increases in strength and muscle mass of the lower extremities compared to the CON group.
