Abstract

Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for low back pain between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a hospital. The sample consisted of 100 nurses from the intensive care unit and 100 nurses from the medical-surgical department. Data were collected through a questionnaire about demographic characteristics, work conditions, and health status. The results showed that the prevalence of low back pain was higher among nurses in the intensive care unit than among those in the medical-surgical department. The most common risk factors for low back pain were age, duration of nursing practice, type of shift, and physical demands of the job.

Keywords: low back pain, prevalence, risk factors, nurses, intensive care unit, medical-surgical department

Introduction

Low back pain (LBP) is a global public health problem that affects a large number of people worldwide. It is one of the leading causes of disability and absence from work (García-Lacort & García-Cardena, 2016). In Spain, LBP is the most frequent cause of long-term sick leave (García-Lacort & García-Cardena, 2016). The prevalence of LBP varies widely depending on the population studied, ranging from 1% to 87% (García-Lacort & García-Cardena, 2016).

Nurses are at a high risk of developing LBP due to their work conditions. They perform tasks that require prolonged periods of standing, walking, bending, lifting, and carrying heavy loads, as well as repetitive movements and awkward postures (García-Lacort & García-Cardena, 2016). Additionally, nurses often work under time pressure and have irregular schedules, which can contribute to fatigue and stress, further increasing the risk of LBP (García-Lacort & García-Cardena, 2016).

This study aimed to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for LBP between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a hospital. The sample consisted of 100 nurses from the intensive care unit (ICU) and 100 nurses from the medical-surgical department. Data were collected through a questionnaire about demographic characteristics, work conditions, and health status. The results showed that the prevalence of LBP was higher among nurses in the ICU than among those in the medical-surgical department. The most common risk factors for LBP were age, duration of nursing practice, type of shift, and physical demands of the job.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or goal. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be achieved.

2. Next, it is important to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, interviews, or observation.

3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to analyze it. This involves identifying patterns, trends, and potential causes.

4. After analysis, the next step is to develop a plan or strategy. This should outline the steps needed to achieve the goal.

5. The final step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress.
