Canada's Residential Schools: The History, Part 2, 1939 to 2000 Commission de vérité et réconciliation du Canada, 2016-01-01 Between 1867 and 2000 the Canadian government sent over 150 000 Aboriginal children to residential schools across the country Government officials and missionaries agreed that in order to civilize and Christianize Aboriginal children it was necessary to separate them from their parents and their home communities For children life in these schools was lonely and alien Discipline was harsh and daily life was highly regimented Aboriginal languages and cultures were denigrated and suppressed Education and technical training too often gave way to the drudgery of doing the chores necessary to make the schools self sustaining Child neglect was institutionalized and the lack of supervision created situations where students were prey to sexual and physical abusers Legal action by the schools former students led to the creation of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada in 2008 The product of over six years of research the Commission s final report outlines the history and legacy of the schools and charts a pathway towards reconciliation Canada s Residential Schools The History Part 2 1939 to 2000 carries the story of the residential school system from the end of the Great Depression to the closing of the last remaining schools in the late 1990s It demonstrates that the underfunding and unsafe living conditions that characterized the early history of the schools continued into an era of unprecedented growth and prosperity for most Canadians A miserly funding formula meant that into the late 1950s school meals fell short of the Canada Food Rules Overcrowding poor sanitation and a failure to adhere to fire safety rules were common problems throughout this period While government officials had come to view the schools as costly and inefficient the churches were reluctant to countenance their closure It was not until the late 1960s that the federal government finally wrested control of the system away from the churches Government plans to turn First Nations education over to the provinces met with opposition from Aboriginal organizations that were seeking Indian Control of Indian Education Following parent led occupation of a school in Alberta many of the remaining schools came under Aboriginal administration The closing of the schools coincided with a growing number of convictions of former staff members on charges of sexually abusing students These trials revealed the degree to which sexual abuse at the schools had been covered up in the past Former students who came to refer to themselves as Survivors established regional and national organizations and provided much of the leadership for the campaign that led to the federal government issuing in 2008 an apology to the former students and their families

how such mechanisms introduce elements of a market approach as well as private sector initiative and resources They show how examples already in operation serve to highlight the design challenges legal technical and ethical that must be overcome if these mechanisms are to be effective and widely accepted

HC 311 - Impact of Changes to Civil Legal Aid Under Part 1 of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Justice Committee, 2015 Since the reforms came into effect there has been a significant underspend in the civil legal aid budget because the MoJ failed to ensure that those who are eligible for legal aid are able to access it This has been partly due to a lack of public information including information about the Civil Legal Advice telephone gateway for debt advice and the Committee recommends that the MoJ take prompt steps to redress this The Committee also concludes that the exceptional cases funding scheme has not worked as Parliament intended It was supposed to act as a safety net protecting access to justice for the most vulnerable The Committee expects the MoJ to react rapidly to ensure that the scheme fulfils Parliament's intention that the most vulnerable people are able to access legal assistance The Government's reforms have led to an increase in the number and a change in the profile of litigants in person increasingly these are people who have no choice but to represent themselves and who may thus have difficulty in doing so effectively although many tribunals are accustomed to dealing with unrepresented litigants the courts have to expend more resources in order to assist them The MoJ has not been able to demonstrate that it has achieved value for money for the taxpayer Although significant savings have been achieved efforts to target legal aid at those who most need it have focused on intervention aimed at the point after a crisis has already developed rather than on prevention
