Fighting At The Fertility Front E Scott Sills, MD PhD ,2014-10-28 Throughout the entire history of world armed conflict the proportion of battle injuries involving the genitals was minimal rarely above 5% But sadly by the end of 2007 this statistic was no longer valid for the U S military While standard issue body armor protects the torso some lower extremity wounds are so severe that all or part of the reproductive organs are obliterated E Scott Sills MD PhD As America picks up the pieces from more than a decade of war a caliper has never been laid across one critical casualty the long term consequences of military service on the fertility of those in uniform Written for a general audience Fighting At The Fertility Front includes separate chapters for men women and follows their journeys from reception basic training to far away places like the open burn pits of Afghanistan and back The list of ingredients here is provocative Sex soldiers fertility overseas service and the military industrial congressional complex that funds it all or in the case of fertility treatment for Veterans paradoxically denies funding This one of a kind book confronts some deeply unsettling questions from our armed service members and their loved ones Should I be worried about fertility if my partner is in the military How can hazards of defense work diminish future reproductive capacity Is it true that the Army's standard combat uniform is coated with a potential reproductive toxin The answers may surprise you Before deciding on a fertility attack plan you need credible intelligence about the target Until now there has never been any field book outlining maneuvers to maximize the chances of a military patient growing his or her family Recognizing that fertility after deployment is another unknown unknown of military service this book helps guide a clear way to bring back baby

PRINCIPLES OF TACTICAL COMBAT CASUALTY CARE TCCC

The principles of Tactical Combat Casualty Care are fundamentally different from those of traditional civilian trauma care where most medical providers and medics train. These differences are based on both the unique patterns and types of wounds that are suffered in combat and the tactical conditions medical personnel face in combat. Unique combat wounds and tactical conditions make it difficult to determine which intervention to perform at what time. Besides addressing a casualty's medical condition, responding medical personnel must also address the tactical problems faced while providing care in combat. A medically correct intervention at the wrong time may lead to further casualties. Put another way, good medicine may be a bad tactical decision which can get the rescuer and the casualty killed. To successfully navigate these issues, medical providers must have skills and training oriented to combat trauma care as opposed to civilian trauma care. The specifics of casualty care in the tactical setting will depend on the tactical situation, the injuries sustained by the casualty, the knowledge and skills of the first responder, and the medical equipment at hand. In contrast to a hospital Emergency Department setting where the patient IS the mission, on the battlefield care of casualties sustained is only PART of the mission. TCCC recognizes this fact and structures its guidelines to accomplish three primary goals:

1. Treat the casualty
2. Prevent additional casualties
3. Complete the mission

In thinking about the management of combat casualties, it is helpful to divide care into three distinct phases, each with its own characteristics and limitations.

Assessing Readiness in Military Women

Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee on Body Composition, Nutrition, and Health of Military Women, 1998-02-01

U.S. military personnel are required to adhere to standards of body composition, fitness, and appearance to achieve and maintain readiness, that is, the maintenance of optimum health and performance so they are ready for deployment at any moment. In 1992, the Committee on Military Nutrition Research reviewed the existing standards and found among other things that the standards for body composition required for women to achieve an appearance goal seemed to conflict with those necessary to ensure the ability to perform many types of military tasks. This report addresses that conflict and reviews and makes recommendations about current policies governing body composition and fitness, as well as postpartum return to duty standards, Military Recommended Dietary Allowances, and physical activity and nutritional practices of military women to determine their individual and collective impact on the health, fitness, and readiness of active-duty women.
