Weippl, 2022-06-01 The new field of cryptographic currencies and consensus ledgers commonly referred to as blockchains is receiving increasing interest from various different communities These communities are very diverse and amongst others include technical enthusiasts activist groups researchers from various disciplines start ups large enterprises public authorities banks financial regulators business men investors and also criminals The scientific community adapted relatively slowly to this emerging and fast moving field of cryptographic currencies and consensus ledgers This was one reason that for quite a while the only resources available have been the Bitcoin source code blog and forum posts mailing lists and other online publications Also the original Bitcoin paper which initiated the hype was published online without any prior peer review Following the original publication spirit of the Bitcoin paper a lot of innovation in this field has repeatedly come from the community itself in the form of online publications and online conversations instead of established peer reviewed scientific publishing On the one side this spirit of fast free software development combined with the business aspects of cryptographic currencies as well as the interests of today's time to market focused industry produced a flood of publications whitepapers and prototypes On the other side this has led to deficits in systematization and a gap between practice and the theoretical understanding of this new field This book aims to further close this gap and presents a well structured overview of this broad field from a technical viewpoint The archetype for modern cryptographic currencies and consensus ledgers is Bitcoin and its underlying Nakamoto consensus Therefore we describe the inner workings of this protocol in great detail and discuss its relations to other derived systems Catalog of War Production Board Reporting and Application Forms, as of November 2, 1945 United States.
