This privacy statement discloses the privacy practices of (Name of Owner), hereinafter called Owner. The types of information that we collect fall under two general categories: personally identifiable information (PI) and non-personally identifiable information (NPI). PI consists of any information which can be used to specifically identify you as an individual, whereas NPI consists of information that does not reveal your identity. The following sections describe how your PI and NPI are collected by us, and how we use such information.

How We Collect and Use Information

Appendix A Log File

A log file is a file that lists actions that have occurred. For example, Web servers maintain log files listing every request made to the server. With log file analysis tools, it is possible to get a good idea of where visitors are coming from, how often they return, and how they navigate through a site. Using cookies enabled Webmasters to log even more detailed information about how individual users are accessing a site.

1. Any time you visit any of our website, our servers automatically gather information from your browser such as the following:
 - a. Your IP address;
 - b. Browser type;
 - c. Internet service provider (ISP);
 - d. Referring and exit pages;
 - e. Platform type;
 - f. The date and time you visit; and
 - g. The number of hits (total number of times our site has been visited).

Log files are used to analyze trends, administer the site, prevent fraud, track total movement, and gather broad demographic information. For example, we may log your IP address for system administration purposes. IP addresses are logged to track a user's session. This gives us an idea of which parts of our site users are visiting. We do not share information in the log files with anyone not directly affiliated with our company.

Discussion

A cookie is a small string of text stored on a user's computer by a web browser. A cookie consists of bits of information such as user preferences, shopping cart contents, and the identifier for a server-based session, or other data used by websites. It is sent as an HTTP header by a web server to a web client (usually a browser) and then sent back unchanged by the client each time he or she accesses that server. A cookie can be used for authenticating, session tracking and maintaining specific information about users, such as site preferences.
