I hope I have helped a little. Thank you for this opportunity. I am glad to have connected with you.

The Philippines is still an important and original ASEAN member. However, the organization encounters issues as a result of the wide range of political viewpoints. It would appear that trading relations will be the most important aspect of ASEAN and the Philippines' relations.

By announcing six free trade agreements with other regional economies, the group has promoted economic integration. However, a number of experts claim that the absence of a strategic vision, divergent national interests, and poor leadership limit the impact of ASEAN.

ASEAN's biggest challenge is negotiating a unified approach to China, particularly in response to its widespread maritime claims in the South China Sea. Another important aspect is that the United States still sees Asia as vital to the success of its strategic rebalance and strategic relationship, both politically and economically with Asia.

Likewise, other trading groups and nations, like the EU, Russia, Australia, Japan, etc., also regard ASEAN as essential in maintaining the trading strength of the individual member states of ASEAN.

Foreign investors should especially be on the lookout for infrastructure development projects further linking the Philippines to the rest of Asia, while the Philippines itself is positioning itself both as a BPO service center for ASEAN.
