Audience Adair Rounthwaite, 2017-02-21 The 1980s was a critical decade in shaping today's art production. While newly visible work concerned with power and identity hinted at a shift toward multiculturalism, the 80s were also a time of social conservatism that resulted in substantial changes in arts funding. In Asking the Audience, Adair Rounthwaite uses this context to analyze the rising popularity of audience participation in American art during this important decade. Rounthwaite explores two seminal and interrelated art projects sponsored by the Dia Art Foundation in New York: Group Material's Democracy and Martha Rosler's If You Lived Here. These projects married issues of social activism such as homelessness and the AIDS crisis with various forms of public participation, setting the precedent for the high-profile participatory practices currently dominating global contemporary art. Rounthwaite draws on diverse archival images, audio recordings, and more than thirty new interviews to analyze the live affective dynamics to which the projects gave rise. Seeking to foreground the audience experience in understanding the social context of participatory art, she argues that affect is key to the audience's ability to exercise agency within the participatory artwork. From artists and audiences to institutions, funders, and critics, Asking the Audience traces the networks that participatory art creates between various agents, demonstrating how, since the 1980s, leftist political engagement has become a cornerstone of the institutionalized consumption of contemporary art.

The Big Enchilada Stuart Stevens, 2007-11-01 Six years ago he owned a baseball team. Now he's the leader of the free world. The Big Enchilada is a comic anthem to the wild and improbable crusade that propelled George W. Bush into the White House and to the close-knit group of Texans who made it happen, written by the Bush campaign's Renaissance man, Time magazine Writer and political strategist Stuart Stevens. He has been hailed by Martin Amis as the perfect companion: brave, funny, and ever watchful. And The New Yorker has praised him for having a wonderful eye for the curiosities of human behavior. Here he tells the surprisingly funny, adrenaline-fueled story of the Bush campaign, the public never saw from the Austin coffee shop where Stevens watched Karl Rove sketch out the Republican master plan on a napkin to the small Methodist church in Crawford, Texas, where the blue-jeaned future president prepared for the make-or-break debates that no one expected him to win. He offers the inside view of the rise and flameout of maverick John McCain, the struggle to come up with a message that could be heard over a booming economy. Times have never been better. Vote for change, campaign aides joked, and the fierce debates over the upside and downside of going negative against a vulnerable adversary. Above all, Stevens turns the familiar political tale of disillusionment on its head. From the moment he arrived in Austin to join the campaign, Stevens got in here and let's bond, the governor said. He discovered the peculiar pleasure of working with people who not only respected and admired their candidate but actually liked him. They faced formidable obstacles from a nation surfing a vast wave of peace and prosperity to an experienced opponent whose seasoned advisers bragged that the campaign would be a slaughterhouse. But Texans, as Stevens learned, are a confident bunch, and the Bush crowd remained convinced they would win the biggest prize of all, even on the brink of losing. This is the story of what it was like, as only an insider could tell it.

From Thine Own Well Norm Hamilton, 2013-11-18

Disillusioned former Yukon mining exploration worker Landon McGuire is torn from his self-imposed exile into a Canada he no longer recognizes. Water is a precious commodity and the environment is contaminated. Individual rights are non-existent and corporate rule is the law, a law enforced by the corporation's own brutal militia. Unregulated fracking and irresponsible mining have destroyed the watersheds. A small group of people band together to combat the ruling coalition but find themselves embroiled in a dangerous game. Landon meets Nora and is drawn into the fray. What begins as a fact-finding mission turns deadly as they get closer to the truth. Deceit, threats and violent encounters emphasize the reality that economy trumps environment, even when lives are at stake. This is a truly thought-provoking story that people need to read. I enjoyed the plot twists and the vivid description, the tension and moments of humor. Erin Potter Shamrock, Editing.
