

Geomorphology: Grade 11 Geography Summary

Geomorphology is the study of landforms, their processes, forms, and the landscapes they create. It involves understanding how natural forces shape the Earth's surface and change it over time.

1. Internal and External Earth Processes

- Internal Processes (Endogenic Forces): These originate from within the Earth and shape landforms through tectonic activities.
  - Tectonic Movements: Include earthquakes, volcanic activity, and mountain building.
  - Folding and Faulting: Caused by tectonic forces; folding creates ridges and valleys, while faulting leads to fractures and displacement of rock layers.
- External Processes (Exogenic Forces): Involve weathering, erosion, and deposition, driven by forces like water, wind, ice, and gravity.
  - Weathering: The breakdown of rocks at the Earth's surface into smaller particles, which can be physical, chemical, or biological.
  - Erosion and Deposition: Erosion transports weathered materials, while deposition occurs when these materials settle and accumulate.

2. Types of Landforms

- Mountains: Created by tectonic forces like folding, faulting, and volcanic activity.
- Plateaus: Elevated flat areas formed by uplift or lava flow.
- Plains: Large, flat areas resulting from sediment deposition over time.

Base-level Impact Dan Bowman,2023-05-11 Much of the final shaping of the global landscape is accomplished by incision of river networks The base level is a principle determinate controlling the global relief by processes of erosion and aggradation In the populated world entrenchments triggered by base level changes may become devastating events damaging agricultural lands undercutting bridges and destroying roads The aim of this book as a chapter in fluviomorphology is to present the base level control when active in the continental interior unrelated to marine base level fluctuations along the continental margins nor to sequence stratigraphic tract models in Exxon sequence stratigraphic sense The focus is on the morphology and the gross trends of the processes controlling channel evolution through transient signals initiated by base level changes and communicated upstream through the drainage network The book brings together principles and conclusions gained by field work by laboratory studies and by models based on the widely scattered literature The chapters include presentation of different types of base levels discussing the constraints of their altitude the degradation and aggradation responses the temporal and spatial trends along the channel network the controlling factors the knickpoint transient retreat process and its rates Special emphasis is given to the Dead Sea Rift following its extreme base level conditions which make it a unique field laboratory This book is relevant to students in earth sciences as well as to planners hydrologists and engineers dealing with geomorphology and surface drainage Groundwater of South Asia Abhijit Mukherjee,2018-06-01 This book presents recent findings from the South Asian region SA broadly including groundwater studies on a quantity b exploration c quality and pollution d economics management and policies e groundwater and society and f sustainable sources It offers a compilation of compelling authentic insights into groundwater scenarios throughout the water stressed South Asia region Comprising Afghanistan Bangladesh Bhutan India Myanmar Nepal Pakistan and Sri Lanka it is the most densely populated region in the world It occupies approximately 4% of the global land area but supports more than 25% of the global population The SA region now faces an acute shortage of fresh water due to a rapid rise in water demand and changes in societal water use patterns Combining essential advances and perspectives this book offers a valuable resource for all scientists planners and policymakers who are interested in understanding and developing the SA and other related areas Bibliography of North American Geology ,1969 1919 28 cumulation includes material previously issued in the 1919 20 1935 36 issues and also material not published separately for 1927 28 1929 39 cumulation includes material previously issued in the 1929 30 1935 36 issues and also material for 1937 39 not published separately

Tectonics of the Himalaya S. Mukherjee,R. Carosi,P.A. van der Beek, B.K. Mukherjee,D.M. Robinson,2015-09-28 The Himalayan mountain belt which developed during the India Asia collision starting about 55 Ma ago is a dramatically active orogen and it is regarded as the classic collisional orogen. It is characterized by an impressively continuous 2500 km of tectonic units, thrusts and normal faults as well as large volumes of high grade metamorphic rocks and granites exposed at the surface. This constitutes an invaluable field laboratory where amazing crustal sections can be observed directly in very deep gorges. It is possible to unravel the tectonic and metamorphic evolution of litho units to observe the mechanisms of exhumation of deep seated rocks and the propagation of the deformation. Himalayan tectonics has been the target of many studies from numerous international researchers over the years. In the last 15 years there has been an explosion of data and theories from both geological and geophysical perspectives. This book presents the results of integrated multidisciplinary studies including geology, petrology, magmatism, geochemistry, geochronology and geophysics of the structures and processes affecting the continental lithosphere. These processes and their spatial and temporal evolution have major consequences on the geometry and kinematics of the India-Eurasia collision zone. Small-Format Aerial Photography and UAS Imagery
