Digitalizing the Global Text Paul Allen Miller, 2020-01-07 A few years ago globalism seemed to be both a known and inexorable phenomenon With the end of the Cold War the opening of the Chinese economy and the ascendancy of digital technology the prospect of a unified flow of goods and services and of people and ideas seemed unstoppable Political theorists such as Francis Fukuyama proclaimed that we had reached the end of history Yes there were pockets of resistance and reaction but these we were told would be swept away in a relentless tide of free markets and global integration that would bring Hollywood digital finance and fast food to all Religious fundamentalism nationalism and traditional sexual identities would melt away before the forces of modernity and empire A relentless technocratic rationality would sweep all in its wake bringing a neoliberal utopia of free markets free speech and increasing productivity Nonetheless as we have begun to experience the backlash against a global world founded on digital fungibility the perils of appeals to nationalism identity and authenticity have become only too apparent The collapse of Soviet Communism left an ideological vacuum that offered no recognized place from which to oppose global capitalism What is the alternative The anxieties and resentments produced by this new world order among those left behind are often manifested in assertions of xenophobia and particularity This is what it supposedly means to be really American truly Muslim properly Chinese The other is coming to take what is ours and we must defend ourselves

Digitalizing the Global Text is a collection of essays by an international group of scholars situated squarely at this nexus of forces Together these writers examine how literature culture and philosophy in the global and digital age both enable the creation of these simultaneously utopian and dystopian worlds and offer a resistance to them A joint publication from the University of South Carolina Press and the National Taiwan University Press

Life Storying in Oral History Jarmila Mildorf, 2023-06-06 This book proposes the concept of fictional contamination to capture the fact that fictionalization and literary complexity can be found across different kinds of narrative Exploring conversational storytelling in oral history and other interviews from socionarratological perspectives the book systematically discusses key narrative features such as story templates dialogue double deixis focalization or perspective taking and mind representation as well as special narrative forms including second person narration and narratives of vicarious experience These features and forms attest to storytellers linguistic creativity and serve the function of involving listeners by making stories more interesting Shared by fictional and conversational narratives at a basic level they can bring conversational stories closer to fiction and potentially compromise their credibility if used extensively Detailed analyses of broad ranging examples are undertaken against a rich narrative theoretical background drawn from the fields of narratology linguistics oral history life storytelling psychology and philosophy The book is of interest to scholars and students working in these fields and anyone fascinated by the richness of conversational storytelling
