Timeline of Strathfield

Aboriginal History

- The Strathfield Municipality was once inhabited by the WANGAL clan of the DARUG tribe. Little remains of the former Aboriginal occupation of this area.
- The WANGAL clan's country or territory was known as WANNE and it originally extended from the suburbs of Birchgrove and Balmain in the east, to Silverwater and Auburn in the west.

European Settlement

- 1793 European settlement of the district began in the area which is currently known as Homebush.
- Land grants were made to English farmers by the NSW Governor Phillip to set up food supplies for Sydney. These were the first land grants made to free settlers (non-convict) and the area of the land grants was known as Liberty Plains.
- These farms failed as the soil conditions did not allow crops to be grown and most of these farms were abandoned.
- The Redmire Estate was subdivided in 1867 and smaller lots of land were offered for sale. The first property built was Thomas Henderson's 'Seven Oaks Farm', a dairy farm located around Victoria Street Strathfield.

Strathfield Today

- Strathfield remains mainly a residential district.
- Since the 1960's, home units and town houses have been built in Strathfield, particularly around railway stations to provide more housing accommodation. Many homes and streets have been heritage listed to preserve areas and items.
- Since World War II, many migrants settled in Strathfield and over time, Strathfield has become highly multicultural. The last Australian Census indicated that over 50% of the population was born in countries other than Australia.
