Emancipation, the Media, and Modernity : Arguments about the Media and Social Theory Nicholas Garnham,2000-04-06 This book adopts a polemical stance It approaches the problems raised by the media by way of a set of arguments with the two dominant paradigms now current for thinking about the media DSPost modernism and Information Society theory It argues that the media are important because they raise a set of questions that have been central to social and political theory since the Enlightenment In a series of probes into different sets of questions raised by the media the argument of the book focuses on the problem raised by what Kant called the unsocial sociability of human kind Under what conditions could autonomous free individuals live in viable social communities Or to put it another way what are the related scope for and limits on human reason and emancipation In conducting this argument the book first argues for a necessarily historical perspective It then goes on to examine the implications for emancipation of seeing the media as cultural industries within the wider systems world of the capitalist market economy of seeing the media as technologies of the specialisation of intellectual production and of the separation and increasing social distance between the producers and consumers of symbols It then goes on to argue against current ethnographic trends in audience research and against the focus on everyday life for a reinstatement of interest in the statistical reality of audiences and effects and for a recognition through a return to the Hegelian roots of commodity fetishism and the symbolic interactionist creation of identities that an active audience can be actively involved in its own domination The argument then turns to the problem of how we evaluate the symbolic forms that the media circulate and whether such evaluation can be anything more than a matter of personal taste It is argued that evaluation is in practice unavoidable and without some standards that are more than just subjective any criticism of the medias performance is impossible Via an examination of the debate between the sociology of art and aesthetics it argues for the ethical foundations of aesthetic judgement and for the establishment of agreed standards of aesthetic judgement via the discourse ethic that underlies the argument of the entire book This foregrounding of the discourse ethic then leads on to a discussion of the media and politics Here the argument is that arguments about the media and politics are at the heart of arguments about politics itself These arguments focus it is argued upon the shifting division between the public and the private Here the book returns to the roots of public sphere theory in Rousseaus arguments for the centrality of public spectacle and Kants argument for the centrality of public reason in the practice of democratic politics
