

Study Guide: Plate tectonics 2/soil Rocks/Weathering and Erosion

Plate Tectonics:

1. What is a convergent boundary?
 - a. Why do we call this a destructive boundary? Because it tends to cause destruction by seismic activity etc.
 - b. What forms when 2 continental plates converge? Mountains will form from a continental convergence.
 - c. What forms when a continental and an oceanic plate converge? When a continental and oceanic plate converge, the oceanic plate will go under and will cause volcanic islands.
2. What is a divergent boundary?
 - a. What forms when 2 continental plates diverge? A rift valley will form after 2 continental plates divergence.
 - b. What forms when 2 oceanic plates diverge? An underwater mountain range will form when two oceanic plates diverge.
 - c. Explain seafloor spreading: Seafloor Spreading is when there is an ocean to ocean divergent plate boundary and this causes an underwater mountain range.
3. What is a transform boundary? When two plates slide past each other.
 - a. What occurs at transform boundaries? Transform boundaries cause earthquakes.
 - b. What causes this to occur? This happens because pressure builds up when they slide against each other.
4. Why does subduction occur (use the term density in your answer)? Subduction occurs when a denser plate goes under a less dense plate because of the difference in density.
5. Where and why do most volcanoes occur? Most volcanoes occur on islands at subduction zones where there is a lot of tectonic activity.
6. What causes the tectonic plates to move? Tectonic plates move because of the convection currents that take place in the mantle.

Rocks and Soil:

7. What is weathering? The process by which natural processes will break down rocks etc.
8. What is erosion? Erosion is the movement of the weathered material.
9. How are igneous rocks formed? Igneous rocks are formed by a rock being melted then cooled.
10. How are sedimentary rocks formed? Sedimentary rocks are formed when sediments are pressed together and become one, these often form in layers.
11. How are metamorphic rocks formed? Metamorphic rocks are formed by already existing rocks going under extreme pressure and heat.
