

A vibrant photograph of the Gaslamp Quarter in San Diego at dusk. The scene features a mix of historic brick buildings and modern architecture with large glass windows. Several palm trees are planted in the foreground, and the warm glow of city lights is visible through the windows and streets. A large, light-colored circular graphic is overlaid on the upper half of the image, containing the title text.

The $16 Taco Pascale Joassart-Marcelli, 2021-10-09 Having discovered the flavors of barbacoa bibimbap bnh mi sambusas and pupusas white middle class eaters are increasingly venturing into historically segregated neighborhoods in search of authentic eateries run by and for immigrants and people of color. This interest in ethnic food and places fueled by media attention and capitalized on by developers contributes to gentrification and the very people who produced these vibrant foodscapes are increasingly excluded from them. Drawing on extensive fieldwork geographer Pascale Joassart Marcelli traces the transformation of three urban San Diego neighborhoods whose foodscapes are shifting from serving the needs of longtime minoritized residents who face limited food access to pleasing the tastes of wealthier and whiter newcomers. The 16 Taco illustrates how food can both enplace and displace immigrants shedding light on the larger process of gentrification and the emotional cultural economic and physical displacement it produces. It also highlights the contested food geographies of immigrants and people of color by documenting their contributions to the cultural food economy and everyday struggles to reclaim ethnic foodscapes and lead flourishing and hunger free lives. Joassart Marcelli offers valuable lessons for cities where food related development projects transform neighborhoods at the expense of the communities they claim to celebrate.
