ELECTRICAL DESCRIPTION OF CIRCUITS

This instrument is a combination radio receiver, similar to Radiola 85, an electric phonograph, employing an improved type of magnetic pick-up and tone arm assembly, recording mechanism for which follow a radio program in record production, the same may be recorded on the Victor label recording record heads. The tone arm shows a free internal control tone.

Radiola 86 incorporates the tone control of Radiola 85 and when the rotary switch is in the "Radio" position, it is electrically the same as Radiola 85. The other switch is shown in Figure 1. The operation is the other positions follows.

Phonograph—When the rotary control switch is in the "Phonograph" position, radio portion of the receiver is made inoperative and the record mechanism is set in motion, together with the power amplifier. The magnetic pick-up is brought to the "idle" type tone arm. This arm is sprung from the effect of swing and then comes balancing so as to have sufficient weight and tone pressure for reproduction. This weight prevents the tone arm and pick-up from vibrating the record mechanism and provides tone reproduction, due to the needle following exactly the record variations. The phonograph parts are shown in Figure 1.
