

Liquid modernity?

Zygmunt Bauman's theory applied to organisational thinking.

Competition through innovation is realised by a sudden impact followed by an immediate obsolescence. Innovation as a continuous driver for improvement, implies a fast changing organisation not only in terms of products and services but also regard to ideas and culture. New ideas serve to overtake old, obsolete knowledge. We are always looking for new better knowledge so we can throw away the old one.

History isn't settled, it is simply a trail left in time by several human choices of different origins, almost never blended.

So Bauman shows how society is changing, from the accumulation of knowledge and goods, to a fast renewing culture of consumerism as well as goods and knowledge, the Market is primarily a group of clients to seduce, they are not people. The seduction game, to have an instant opportunity to consume things and experiences before they go out of date, is the purpose of our consumer lives. We are all clients before people.

Due to this reason we are continuously throwing the anchors and pulling them up. A continuous stop and start which become a constant development. Pulling up the anchors is similar to parking a car then driving away. We throw down the anchors in a safe hub ready to sail again as soon the situation appears favourable. Investing in a profound knowledge, building new results, seems threatening considering the tendency of any knowledge to being rapidly out of date. The common paradigm is "everything expires, as well as knowledge does".

TEMPORARY

In this vortex of change, specific know-how applied immediately is much better. Perhaps used it only once then thrown away. To build up a deep, strong knowledge based on commitment and experience is no longer valuable. Having experience does not entitle you to make the right choice again and again because future situations may be different. Previous choosing process do not serves us anymore, we need to make new decision making processes, inventing new methods, new approaches to a quite different problems' factor.

theoretical context and implications of Bauman's theory Liquid Racism Nathan Kerrigan, Damian Breen, Yusef Bakkali, 2025-06-24 Bauman argues that our lives are ruled by ambivalence. In this ambiguous world, liquified social structures can create an anxiety towards the other. This innovative book takes Bauman's notions of liquid modernity one step further to develop a theory of liquid racism. The authors show that while post-race theory argues that society is moving beyond racism, in reality, historical manifestations of racism continue. Except society is now faced with a racism whose structures have changed. Examining Brexit, education, and black youth culture as case studies to reveal the application of liquid racism, this book makes a major contribution to our understanding of the unchanging nature of racism.

Haedicke, 2014-05-07 Richard Matheson (1926-2013) was a prolific author and screenwriter whose career helped shape the horror and fantasy genres in literature, film, and television for over sixty years. Matheson authored more than ninety short stories and dozens of novels, many of which, including I Am Legend, A Stir of Echoes, What Dreams May Come, The Shrinking Man, Hell House, and Bid Time Return, have been adapted into feature films. Despite his extensive body of work and influence, however, Matheson has remained largely outside the scope of academic scrutiny. The essays in Reading Richard Matheson: A Critical Survey provide the first critical overview of Matheson's texts, covering seven of Matheson's novels, a sampling of short stories, and several adaptations for both film and television. The essays are arranged thematically and address the sociopolitical anxieties reflected in Matheson's oeuvre, consider his precursors and successors, and situate him within narrative traditions of mythology, cinema, genre, and memory.
