

The Second Amendment and Gun Control

In today's society the issues on gun violence and gun control have been stronger than ever. Sparking this great debate involves the "gun grabbers" and the "gun nuts" who work endlessly to enforce stricter gun laws or to abolish the second amendment and citizen's rights to bear arms. Both sides agree that there is a gun problem: the United States has the highest rate of firearm suicide and homicide among industrialized countries. An estimated 34,000 Americans die from gunshot wounds per year (Kaplan & Geling). The two sides have philosophically contradictory solutions to the problem, a divide that is only widened by emotionally charged stories of gun violence like in Aurora, Colorado and Newton, Connecticut.

Gun grabbers think the gun problem should be solved by taking away all guns, thus making gun regulation an important step in ensuring Americans' safety. Gun nuts believe the opposite, arguing that gun ownership is a preventative factor for gun violence. If everyone had a firearm, people would be able to defend themselves, and criminals would be less likely to commit gun crime out of fear of being shot in the process (Winkler 76). The U.S. Constitution promises that the government will protect U.S. citizens and their natural born rights. "The Bill of Rights explicitly states U.S. citizens' unalienable rights, one of which is the right to bear arms.

The second amendment states "A well-regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a Free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed. (Winkler, A. (2011). The government shouldn't induce more gun control, if they do so, then the government would be infringing upon the second amendment, failing to properly address violence, and infracting upon the freedom to own guns for hunting and sport. An increase in gun control will not solve the violence issues although people insist it will. However, criminals already obtain guns illegally. "Guns don't kill people, people kill people." It's time we explore new solutions to this problem such as better mental health awareness, instead of imposing stricter gun laws.

Gun Grabbers tend to want all handguns banned although in reality that's unlikely vs the gun nuts who wish to solve America's gun issues with guns. During a midnight premiere of The Dark Knight Rises on July 20, 2012, a mass shooting occurred inside the Century 16 Movie Theater located in Aurora, Colorado that resulted in 12 fatalities.( A short five months another mass shooting occurred in Newtown, Connecticut, on December 14th that killed 28 people. (Encyclopedia Britannica, 2012) In my personal opinion, I'm all for supporting the Second Amendment that protects the U.S. citizen's rights to possess firearms for lawful purposes such as self-defense within a citizen's home and anywhere in public that legally allows you to open carry. The real question is, can these arguments over gun control reac
