Layers of the Atmosphere: An Exploration

The Earth's layers are vital to life. Understanding atmospheric phenomena, from weather to climate, is essential. This worksheet explores the layers of the atmosphere, their characteristics, and their importance to life on Earth.

Troposphere: The lowest layer, extending from the surface to about 10-12 km. It is where most weather occurs and where we live. Temperature decreases with altitude.

Stratosphere: The layer above the troposphere, extending to about 50 km. Temperature increases with altitude due to the presence of ozone. The International Space Station orbits in the stratosphere.

Thermosphere: The layer above the stratosphere, extending to about 600 km. Temperature increases with altitude due to the absorption of high-energy solar radiation. The aurora borealis occurs in this layer.

Exosphere: The outermost layer, extending from the top of the thermosphere to space. It is composed of thin layers of gas that eventually escape into space.

Diagram: A cross-section of the Earth's atmosphere showing the layers and their boundaries. The layers are labeled: Troposphere, Stratosphere, Thermosphere, and Exosphere. The boundaries are labeled: Tropopause, Stratopause, and Thermopause. The diagram also shows the International Space Station orbiting in the stratosphere and the aurora borealis in the thermosphere.
