Fundamentals of Plan Making Edward J. Jepson, Jr., Jerry Weitz, 2015-12-07 Urban and regional planning programs aspire to prepare practitioners to write and implement plans primarily at the local level of government These programs are very much professional in their aspirations as opposed to research oriented Yet academic planning programs often place greater emphasis on theory than practice For decades the planning academy has acknowledged a major disconnect between what the planning academy teaches students and the techniques and skills needed to be a successful professional practitioner Fundamentals of Plan Making will give planning students an understanding of research design as it applies to planning develop familiarity with various data sources and help them acquire knowledge and the ability to conduct basic planning analyses such as population projections housing needs assessments development impact analyses and land use plans Students will also learn how to implement the various citizen participation methods used by planners and develop an appreciation of the values and roles of practicing planners In Fundamentals of Plan Making Edward Jepson and Jerry Weitz bring their extensive experience as practicing academics and give planning students the practical hands on tools they need to implement the various methods used to create and implement real plans and policies Its chapters on transportation housing environment economic development and other core development topics also make it a handy reference for planning practitioners

Les troubles liés aux événements traumatiques. Guide des meilleures pratiques pour une clientèle complexe Suzie Bond, 2019-04-23 T00:00:00-04:00 Au Canada la majorité 76 % de la population vivra un vnement traumatique au cours de sa vie. Même si la plupart des personnes arrivent à adapter un tel événement, près de 10 % développeront un trouble de stress post-traumatique (TSPT). Ce nombre peut tripler voire quadrupler dans les populations à plus haut risque, comme les militaires, les victimes d'agressions sexuelles et les individus gravement blessés. Outre le TSPT, plusieurs troubles peuvent apparaître à la suite d'un trauma : soit une humeur dépressive, de l'insomnie et des cauchemars, une consommation inappropriée d'alcool ou de drogue, pour ne nommer que ceux-ci. En somme, les cliniciens sont souvent confrontés à cette clientèle des plus complexes. Cet ouvrage est le premier en français à présenter les meilleures pratiques dans l'évaluation et le traitement du TSPT et des troubles connexes dans un langage accessible aux cliniciens. Ancré rigoureusement à la fois dans la recherche scientifique et dans la pratique clinique, il se veut un exercice de transfert de connaissances de la recherche vers la clinique. Ainsi, il aidera les cliniciens à choisir le traitement le plus approprié pour leur patient et leur apportera les outils et les ressources nécessaires pour mettre les recommandations en pratique. Il pourra aussi être utilisé auprès des futurs intervenants afin de parfaire leur formation concernant l'évaluation et l'intervention auprès des victimes de trauma.

Turn-taking in human communicative interaction Judith Holler, Robin H. Kendrick, Marisa Casillas, 2016-05-09

The core use of language is in face to face conversation. This is characterized by rapid turn taking. This turn taking poses a number of central puzzles for the psychology of language. Consider for example that in large corpora the gap between turns is on the order of 100 to 300 ms but the latencies involved in language production require minimally between 600 ms for a single word or 1500 ms for a simple sentence. This implies that participants in conversation are predicting the ends of the incoming turn and preparing in advance. But how is this done? What aspects of this prediction are done when? What happens when the prediction is wrong? What stops participants coming in too early? If the system is running on prediction, why is there consistently a mode of 100 to 300 ms in response time? The timing puzzle raises further puzzles: it seems that comprehension must run parallel with the preparation for production but it has been presumed that there are strict cognitive limitations on more than one central process running at a time. How is this bottleneck overcome? Far from being easy, as some psychologists have suggested, conversation may be one of the most demanding cognitive tasks in our everyday lives. Further questions naturally arise: how do children learn to master this demanding task and what is the developmental trajectory in this domain? Research shows that aspects of turn taking such as its timing are remarkably stable across languages and cultures but the word order of languages varies enormously. How then does prediction of the incoming turn work when the verb, often the informational nugget in a clause, is at the end? Conversely, how can production work fast enough in languages that have the verb at the beginning, thereby requiring early planning of the whole clause? What happens when one changes modality, as in sign languages, with the loss of channel constraints? Is turn taking much freer? And what about face to face communication amongst hearing individuals? Do gestures, gaze and other body behaviors facilitate turn taking? One can also ask the phylogenetic question: how did such a system evolve? There seem to be parallels/analogies in duetting bird species and in a variety of monkey species but there is little evidence of anything like this among the great apes. All this constitutes a neglected set of problems at the heart of the psychology of language and of the language sciences. This Research Topic contributes to advancing our understanding of these problems by summarizing recent work from psycholinguists, developmental psychologists, students of dialog and conversation analysis, linguists, phoneticians and comparative ethologists.
