Write an essay stating your opinion on whether a person must acquire material possessions to be happy.

Many people attach themselves to "things" and then when those things are lost or are taken away – they are miserable. A person does not need to acquire material possessions to be happy.
Having a loving family is more important than acquiring material possessions. Imagine being able to attain every material thing imaginable, but having no one to enjoy the fun with each day. Being surrounded by people who support you and encourage you to be your best can even make you forget about the "things" that you don't have.
Often times people take being in good health for granted. Right now there are people in the cancer units and the burn units of hospitals around the country, wishing for better days. They would probably get rid of all of the material things they own just to be in better health.
Being surrounded by a loving family and having your health are far more important statuses in life than having a lot of material things that don't guarantee happiness. A person simply doesn't have to acquire material possessions to be happy.

Polarization Alan Fortuna,2019-07-22 The concept of polarization has become an important topic of interest in politics society and discourse around the world today In the European Union EU polarizing rhetoric has driven politics into divided camps on issues ranging from immigration to economic integration In the United States polarization has become a universal buzzword and significant research has been done on it as a political and sociological phenomenon But there has been little scholarly work on polarization as a communicative phenomenon since the late 1970s At the same time holes remain in contemporary rhetorical theory regarding the concept of the orator In short the discipline lacks a clearly defined category to deal with strategic communication by collective entities such as social and political movements This work fills both gaps at once It focuses on polarization as a rhetorical strategy that seeks to create division and solidarity in audiences In doing so it establishes and develops new theoretical categories for contemporary rhetoric updates and refines existing work on polarization as a communicative phenomenon and illustrates the utility of new concepts by providing a case study involving the tea party network in the United States
