LESSON TITLE:

DESIGNING A RESEARCH PROJECT RELATED TO DAILY LIFE

LEARNING COMPETENCIES:

- Narrow down a general topic into a smaller one;
- Identify possible research problems; and
- Design a research project useful to daily life.

SUMMARY OF TASKS/ ACTION:

When finding the right research paper topic, let's consider this:

- To write your title, you must start with a topic. There is actually no such thing as a single best topic. It is easier to jot down three topics of your choice, or even five, instead of selecting one single topic. Soon you will realize there is wisdom to this practice.
- Identify problem situations. At home, there are problems that you dwell on. Examples are relationships, money matters, unemployment, infidelity and more. In school, you would hear students complain about failing grades, teachers' teaching strategies, limited allowances, school facilities and equipment and a lot more. You can move to the larger community and look into problems on politics, prices of commodities, and other concerns. For sure, if given the opportunity, you would help in a way you can to ease people out of these problems. These are already your sources of a topic or topics of research.
- Consider your passion or interest. Your interest in a topic may be caused by your rich background knowledge about it and by its unfamiliarity to you. Your real interest in a subject push you to research, investigate, or inquire about it with full enthusiasm, motivation, and energy.
- Make sure you have enough resources for your topic. This means finding a topic that is discussed not just on website or blogs, but more so on books, articles or even encyclopedia references. Find a topic that is both interesting and has plenty of published materials. Check magazine articles as well.
- Pick a topic that is timely and relevant. The topic is relevant if it yields results that are instrumental in societal improvement. It is timely if it is related to the present.
- Check references from the library. Visit your library to check the availability of reading materials on your chosen topic. Do not hesitate to ask your librarian for assistance.
- Be ready with your personal resources. Assess your research abilities in terms of your financial standing, health condition, mental capacity, needed facilities, and time allotment to enable you to complete your research.
- Master the skill of finding the right research topic. Unfortunately, not all topics you are interested in may be that easy to write about. It becomes even more difficult if there is not enough research material about the topic you've chosen. When confronted on what research paper topics to do, find a broad subject first, then narrow it down.

The following are research topics to be avoided:

- Controversial Topics
These are topics that depend greatly on the writer's opinion. Facts cannot support topics like these.
Example: The Extent of Filipinos' Faith in God
- Highly Technical Topics
For a beginner, researching on topics that require an advanced study, technical knowledge, and vast experience is a difficult task.
Example: Spaceship Building
- Hard-to-Investigate Topics
A subject is hard to investigate if there are no available reading materials about it and if such materials are not up-to-date.
Example: Labor Unions before the Coming of Christ
- Broad Topics
Topics that are too broad will prevent you from giving an in-depth analysis of the subject matter of the paper. The solution to this is to narrow or limit the topic to a smaller one.
