Crayfish Dissection

Background Information:

The crayfish is in the subphylum Crustacea. Like other arthropods, crustaceans are distinguished from other animals by their jointed appendages and exoskeletons made of chitin. The exoskeleton of the crayfish is divided into two parts: a cephalothorax, which contains the head and thoracic regions, and the abdomen.

The exoskeleton that covers the cephalothorax is called the carapace. The carapace of the cephalothorax is fused together, while the abdomen is clearly segmented. The head region of the crayfish has five pairs of appendages. The antennae are the longest appendages and are used for sensing and feeding. The antennules are slightly shorter than the antennae and are used for sensing, feeding, and maintaining the crayfish's balance. A pair of maxillae are located in the mouth and are responsible for crushing food before the crayfish ingests it. Behind (posterior to) the mouth are located three pairs of maxillipeds, which hold food and also contribute to sense and taste. One of the most obvious appendages are the pair of chelipeds, or claws, that are used to grasp food. Behind the chelipeds are 4 pairs of walking legs, which allow the crayfish to crawl over the rocky, aquatic floor. The swimmerets are located on 5 segments of the abdomen. They are used for movement as well as the movement of eggs and sperm during reproduction.

The last segment of the crayfish consists of a tail. This tail fan is comprised of a central part called the telson, with a pair of uropods on either side. These are used for propulsion through the water. The crayfish moves backwards as it forces itself through the water using these structures.

Section 1: External Anatomy

1. Place the crayfish vent to dorsal (ventral side is a dissection tray). Use the diagram above to locate the cephalothorax and the abdomen. The carapace covers the dorsal surface of the cephalothorax. On the ventral surface are the antennae, the maxillipeds, and the maxillae (the mouthparts).
2. Turn the crayfish on its side and view the antennae, which are the longest appendages of the carapace at the front of the animal. Refer to the diagram above. Measure the antennae from the base (where they are attached to the carapace). There are two segments, each with 7 joints. The antennules are much shorter.
3. Locate the maxilla. Then observe the maxillipeds behind the antennae, which are smaller, walking legs that function for the maxillae. Find the four pairs of maxillipeds, which are the last appendages to the cephalothorax.
4. Next, locate the three pairs of maxillipeds, used for sensation and holding food. Then, observe the largest posterior pair of appendages, the chelipeds, or claws. Behind the chelipeds locate the four pairs of walking legs, one pair on each segment.
5. Continue along the crayfish to the abdomen. Observe the 5 distinct segments. On each of the first three segments, observe a pair of swimmerets.
6. On the last abdominal segment, observe a pair of jointed appendages modified into a pair of uropods. In the middle of the uropods, locate the triangular telson.
7. Now turn the crayfish ventral side up. Observe the location of each pair of appendages from the ventral side.

Section 2: Internal Anatomy

1. Using scissors, carefully cut through the back of the carapace along the posterior margin (see 1, as shown in the diagram below). Cut along the midline, making the incision that separates the thoracic portion of the carapace into three regions. Then cut out at the posterior edges of the carapace and extend it along both sides in the head region.
2. Use forceps to carefully lift away the carapace. The gills and other organs are held in place by the carapace. As you lift, observe structures just underneath. If you see too much flesh,

3. Place the specimen on its side, with the head facing left, as shown in the diagram below. Using scissors, make a cut along the dorsal side of the crayfish from the thorax towards the head. Then, cut along the ventral side of the carapace from the thorax towards the rostrum.
